NO MORE REASONS.

Congressman John Allen made a statement a few days ago in which he said: "I am still a Democrat but I have run out of reasons why."

There are thousands of Democrats all over the country today who are in Congressman Allen's fix. If you were to ask them why they are Democrats they would give no logical reason. Now what are these good, honest Democrats going to do about it? We think they should turn the proposition over and see if there are not many good reasons why they should not be Democrats; and if they find such reasons they should cease being Democrats at once.

We think it is very unreasonable in Congressman Allen to continue in the old party when he can find no reason for doing so. Suppose a man was walking along a road that he thought led to a place he was anxious to reach, but was informed after awhile by the best authority that it led to a vast desert. If he continued to walk along the same direction he was going what would you think of him? Would you not believe that he had lost his reason? We think you would. If he had not, he certainly would have stopped at once and headed in a different direction.

When their were but the two old parties there was no place to go, and between two evil people chose what they supposed was the least, and many remained with the Democrats, through very much dissatisfied with that party. Now when that party has gotten into power and is making such a mess of it they are still more dissatisfied; but "what shall we do?" they ask. "Shall we go over to the equally truculent Republicans? It would be like jumping out of the frying pan into the fire." But we have made a road out for both Democrats and Republicans, who, like friend Allen have "run out of reason why" they should travel in roads that lead to certain destruction. Come over and help us. The Populist lamp is burning brightly. "There's a light in the (Populist) window for you, and while the lamp holds out to burn those party waders may return."—Denver Road.

AN AMERICAN CLAIMANT.

The death of William McGarrahan is a melancholy omen to the settlers whose homes have been taken by the railroad monopoly in the same county in which the great property lies for whose possession McGarrahan vainly fought a rich corporation until he wasted away his life. The poor old man who had so gallantly struggled for thirty years against legalized injustice, became one of the shows of Washington. The Capitol guides pointed him out to visitors as a type of the undisciplined claimant. It seemed as if the buoyancy of his spirit never could be broken. But it could be. President Harrison broke it. When, after nearly a quarter of a century of unwearying effort, carrying now this committee and now that, overcoming obstruction in one house in one Congress and making his way through the other in another, McGarrahan had at last so perfected his combinations and so harmonized all differences of opinion as to induce both houses of the Fifty-second Congress to pass bill by immense majorities in one session, his confidence reached its highest point. He seemed to have gained a new lease of life. And then Mr. Harrison struck him down with a veto. It seemed at first as if the old man's indomitable elasticity would rally even from that. He tried to pass the bill over his veto and when that failed he undertook in a new Congress and under a new President to begin the weary siege all over again. But it was too late. Mr. Harrison's veto message had broken something. It was McGarrahan's heart.—Examiner.

Tit For Tat.

Cleveland's veto message will make one of the most effective campaign documents of the year.—Goldbug Paper.

Well, Well. And the Republican vote in the House of Representatives sustaining Cleveland's veto will also make one of the most effective silver party campaign documents of the year.—Belmont Courier.

A Boston man claims to have received information from a clairvoyant, whereby he discovered that he was heir to $5,000,000, which he regained possession of. It is a safe bet that he didn't give the clairvoyant over six bits for the information.

Deputy Marshal Ferguson arrived from Reno yesterday with two prisoners—a white man and a Chinaman, for selling whiskey to Indians. They will await trial at the State Prison. The two were handcuffed together.
